

Online Creative Writing Workshops for Kids with Danielle Davis

About the workshops:

Who: 8 to 12-year olds (3rd-6th grade)

Length: An hour to an hour and a half

Cost: $150

One of my favorite things is helping kids tap into their unique voices and imaginations while building and solidifying their identities as writers.

TWO WORKSHOPS TO CHOOSE FROM:

SHOE STORY

Participants will write an eight-line (and eight-page) partly true, partly made-up story about their shoe in a mini book! It's a fun, engaging, step-by-step way to absorb narrative structure while creating a zany story to keep.

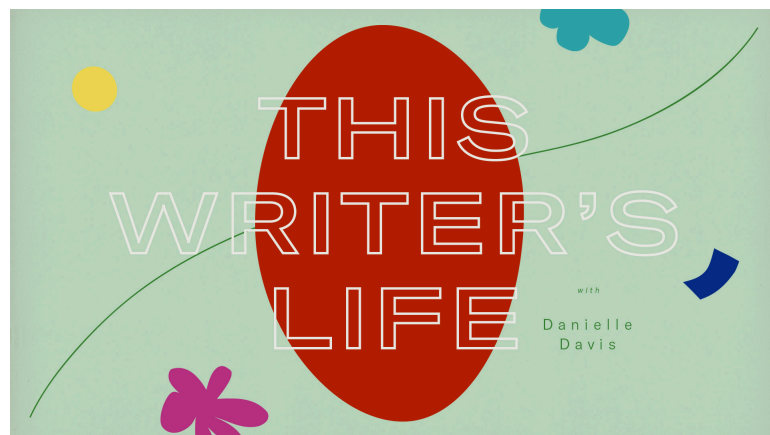

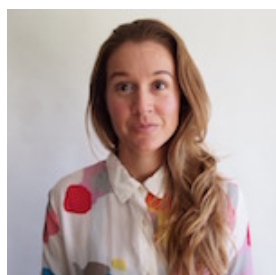

STORY MAIL

Participants will write a story following the acronym S.T.O.R.Y. about a memory they've shared with someone, and then it'll be ready to send it in the mail to that person!

About me:

I grew up in Singapore and Hong Kong and now live in Los Angeles where I read, write, and roller skate. I have an M.A. in literature and creative writing and a background teaching middle school and community college English. One of my favorite things is facilitating workshops for kids that spark their unique imaginations. I blog about picture books at This Picture Book Life and my debut picture book, TO MAKE, illustrated by Mags DeRoma, will be out in summer 2022.

About This Writer's Life:

My YouTube channel, This Writer's Life, is full of videos exploring what it's like to be a writer as well as helpful tools, activities, guidance, and encouragement for any writer's life—from getting ideas to overcoming doubt, from mapping a story to revision techniques and a story generator game. Plus, each episode features someone I know and admire in a creative field offering advice for young writers from their own process!

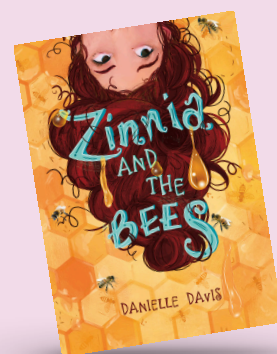

About the book:

Zinnia's yarn bomb flops.

Her older brother (aka best friend and yarn bombing accomplice) leaves without a word.

And then the worst ever of worst evers:
BEES. IN. HER. HAIR.

Finalist for the 2018 SoCal Independent Booksellers Award.
